- If only part of the claim is covered by the insurance agreement, and Gjensidige chooses to engage external legal and/or expert assistance, the costs of deciding the claim are distributed in accordance with the parties' financial interest in the case.
- If Gjensidige is willing to settle a case amicably or pay the claim within the limits of sum insured, no further expenses connected with or related to the dispute will be covered by Gjensidige. Gjensidige is entitled to pay any and all compensation directly to the injured party.
- If the insured party by court is imposed to pay compensation exceeding the sum insured, Gjensidige will cover the costs associated with the legal process proportionally.
- If the insured, without Gjensidige's consent, neglects to appeal against an otherwise binding judgement, Gjensidige will perform an independent assessment of whether the awarded compensation and any costs are within the amount covered by the insurance.
- In the event the sum insured is exceeded, costs that have previously been approved by Gjensidige are covered, as well as interest on the awarded compensations that are covered by the insurance.

- carry out investigations that Gjensidige considers necessary to clarify whether the damage or loss is covered by the insurance agreement.

Legal aid

What is a dispute?

- A dispute exists when a claim has been brought and is disputed, wholly or in part, verbally or in writing.
- Whether there is one or more disputes is decided through a comprehensive assessment. In assessing whether there is one dispute, the following factors are emphasized amongst others:
 - Whether the dispute has the same underlying cause or has the same underlying factual basis.
 - Whether there is a proximity between the legal claims.
 - Whether the claims are regarding the same object, contract, or loss.
- A dispute is not considered to be more than one disputes even though a case consists of more than one individual question brought in more than one action.

Which courts the dispute must fall under the jurisdiction of

- The dispute must fall under the jurisdiction of conciliation institutions with limited court authority, cf. Section 1, paragraph two, of the Courts of Justice Act or the ordinary courts of law, cf. Section 1, paragraph one, of the Courts of Justice Act. If the case is brought before a court of jurisdiction, cf. Section 2 of the Courts of Justice Act, but could have been brought before ordinary courts of law, legal expenses will be covered regardless. The land consolidation courts of Norway are equated with the ordinary courts under the legal aid terms and conditions.

Reporting legal expenses cases

- A request shall be made to the company as soon as possible and in any case no later than one year after a lawyer was first contacted.
- If a lawyer is used in a public administrative procedure case, the deadline for notifying the company is reckoned from the date on which the public administrative appeal procedure is fully exhausted.
- When there is more than one party on the same side, a list of all parties and where they are insured shall be sent.

Reasonable and necessary expenses

- The Disputes Act's sections 6-13 and 10-5 and Chapter 20, the Code of Ethics for Lawyers and the Norwegian Bar Association's guidelines are normative for what constitute reasonable and necessary expenses.
- If there are several parties on the same side with similar interests, Gjensidige may demand that these use the same legal and technical assistance – provided they are insured with the same company.

Information needed by Gjensidige

- In the event of a claim for a settlement, Gjensidige has the same right as the insured to have documented how the lawyer has calculated his or her fee, i.e. engagement confirmation, time sheets and an itemised statement of fees, and Gjensidige shall have documentation that the excess has been paid. Questions regarding the reasonableness of expenses may be submitted to the Norwegian Bar Association.

Sum insured and excess

- The total compensation in each dispute is limited to the sum insured that appears on the certificate of insurance.
- Under any circumstances the compensation is limited to the assumed financial value of the insured Party's interest in the case.
- If there are several parties insured by Gjensidige on the part of the insured, the total compensation is limited to:
 - 3-10 parties - insured sum per dispute NOK 250,000
 - 11-25 parties - insured sum per dispute NOK 500,000
 - 26-49 parties - insured sum per dispute NOK 750,000
 - 50 parties or more - insured sum per dispute NOK 1,000,000
- In addition to an excess of NOK 4,000, the insured must pay and excess of 20% of the expenses that are covered by the insurance.
- There is no excess associated with the travel insurance unless otherwise stated in the certificate of insurance.
- Only one excess will be deducted for each dispute, even if there is more than one party on the same side.
- Where out-of-court mediation is used, the deductible is NOK 0,-

Private policyholders have the right to cancel an agreement of purchase of an insurance contract when the contract was entered into at a distance over phone or online. The period with right of withdrawal is thirty days for personal insurance and fourteen days for other insurance. The deadline for withdrawal runs from the receipt of the insurance document.

If the outstanding credit balance is requested paid out, an account number must be provided. For household customers, the account number must be owned by the policyholder. For commercial customers, the account number and policyholder must be linked to the same organization number. The credit balance can also be transferred to another insurance contract in Gjensidige.

10. Direct debit

22. The insurance companies' central register of claims – FOSS

All claims that are reported to an insurance company may be registered in the insurance companies' central register of claims. When an insurance company reports a claim to the register, the company automatically obtains a list containing the national identity number, organization number, case number, industry code, company, type of claim, date and case officer's initials for all claims previously reported for the same customer – also claims with other insurance companies.

Claims in the register are deleted after 10 years.

23. Register of life insurance and pension agreements

The service office of the Norwegian Financial Services Association maintains a register of all life insurance and pension agreements so that the insured parties and their survivors can find information more easily. 24. Arbitration

The basis for indemnity and values and issues connected with calculating losses from interruption are to be decided by arbitration if the Indemnified Party or Gjensidige requests it. The arbitration valuation is the maximal limit for Gjensidiges liability.

The Insured Party or Gjensidige can demand the compensation assessed by arbitration for physical damage to the following items:

- Motor vehicle, including trailer
- Machinery
- Ship and boat
- Building
- Household goods, property and movables
- Operating losses, including loss of rent
- Valuables

With an exception for operating losses and loss of rent, the arbitration shall only be related to the physical damage to the insured object, and no other claims in connection with the case.

Appraisals will be provided by impartial experts. Each party selects an appraiser. If either party so desires, a special appraiser may be chosen for particular objects or for specific issues in the event of any business interruption losses.

If one of the parties has informed the other of his or her choice in writing, the other party is obliged to provide details of the person chosen within one week of having been informed. Prior to the appraisal, the appraisers will choose an arbitrator. If either of the parties so insists, that person should be resident outside the parties' hometown and outside the municipality in which the insurance event occurred. If one of the parties fails to choose an arbitrator, one will be appointed by the district court in the judicial district where the arbitration is taking place. If the appraisers do not agree on an arbitrator, one will be appointed in the same manner.

The appraisers shall gather any information and undertake any investigations that they deem necessary. They are obliged to make their appraisal on the basis of the insurance contract. The appraisers undertake the valuation – answering any questions connected with business interruption losses – without calling on the arbitrator. If they are unable to agree, the arbitrator will be summoned, and will apply the same rules to make his/her appraisal on those points upon which the arbitrators disagree. If the arbitrator is called upon, compensation will be calculated on the basis of his/her appraisal. Nevertheless, the compensation must not exceed the limits implied by the appraisers' estimates.

The parties each pay their own appraiser. Fees for the arbitrator and possible other costs connected with the appraisal will be shared equally by the two parties. For arbitration vis-à-vis household customers or housing cooperatives pertaining to property damage connected with household insurance or housing cooperatives, when it is Gjensidige that requests arbitration, Gjensidige will pay all arbitration costs. The appraisal's valuations are binding on both parties.
